Short Description

A pressure die cast brass lacing eye, available in a polished brass or a chrome plated finish.

Lacing eyes are an essential piece of hardware for the redirection of lines on board a yacht. They can be used to create more efficient pulling angles for lines on board or to keep certain lines separate from one another. This lacing eye is made form pressure die cast brass and is supplied in either a natural brass or chrome plated brass finish. The lacing eye is supplied without fixings, but 316-grade stainless steel fixings can be purchased separately, just visit our related products section below (2x 3.5mm No.6 screws required).
